Nilüfer Göle, organizer of the colloquium, is Professor of Sociology at CESPRA-EHESS in Paris. She has taught in Istanbul at Boğaziçi University as well as in various international institutions such as the MIT, the New School for Social Research and the Van Leer Jerusalem Institute. She works on Islamic visibility in European public spaces and the debates it engenders on religious and cultural difference, adopting a new reading of modernity from a non-western perspective. She is currently conducting a European scale research project titled “EUROPUBLICISLA: Islam in the Making of a European Public Sphere” awarded by the ERC Advanced Grant of the European Research Council. She is author of Islam in Europe: The Lure of Fundamentalism and the Allure of Cosmopolitanism (Marcus Weiner, Princeton, 2010).
Schirin Amir-Moazami holds a PhD from the department of Social and Political Sciences of the European University Institute in Florence. Since 2009 she is Assistant Professor for Islam in Europe in the department of Islamic Studies at Free University Berlin. Schirin Amir-Moazami published a book on the headscarf controversies in France and Germany ("Politisierte Religion. Der Kopftuchstreit in Deutschland und Frankreich", Bielefeld, transcript, 2007) and numerous articles related to questions of secular orders and Muslims in both countries. Her research interests include Islamic movements in Europe, Political Theory, gender questions and Sociology of Religion. She is currently working on a book manuscript under the title “Producing the Tolerable. On the Governmentalization of gendered Islam in Germany”, in which she looks at micropolitical practices triggered by the emergence of the “Muslim question” in Germany and the discursive apparatus upon which these are based. Looking at both more disciplinary measures like citizenship tests and presumably inclusive ones like dialogue practices the main focus is on the gendered aspects and the question as to how these governmental techniques constitute first and foremost interventions into the body.
Gil Anidjar teaches in the Department of Religion and the Department of Middle Eastern, South Asian and African Studies at Columbia University. He is the author of The Jew, the Arab: A History of the Enemy (Stanford UP, 2003) and Semitics: Race, Religion, Literature (Stanford UP, 2008).

Etienne Balibar is Professor Emeritus of moral and political philosophy at the University of Paris, Nanterre and Distinguished Professor of Humanities at the University of California, Irvine. His work that has been vastly influential on both sides of the Atlantic throughout the humanities and the social sciences focuses on political philosophy, critical theory, epistemology of the social sciences, and ethics. His recent publications include We, the People of Europe? Reflections on Transnational Citizenship (Princeton UP, 2003).
Alexandre Caeiro studied sociology in Ireland (Trinity College Dublin) and France (L’École des hautes études en sciences sociales). From 2004 to 2008 he was a PhD Fellow at the International Institute for the Study of Islam in the Modern World (ISIM) in Leiden and - since 2009 - he has been a Research Fellow at the Erlangen Centre for Islam and Law in Europe (EZIRE) at the Friedrich-Alexander-Universität in Erlangen-Nürnberg. This year Caeiro is a visiting scholar at Cairo University’s Faculty of Economics and Political Science. He has published a number of articles on Islamic Law and Muslim minorities in Europe. Caeiro is currently working on two projects: a book that draws on his PhD dissertation, provisionally entitled “The Minority Fiqh Project”, and a study of Muslim engagements with European integration discourse.

José Casanova

Professor at the Department of Sociology at Georgetown University, and heads the Berkley Center’s Program on Globalization, Religion and the Secular. He has published works in a broad range of subjects, including religion and globalization, migration and religious pluralism, transnational religions, and sociological theory. He is author of Public Religions in the Modern World (University of Chicago Press, 1994).
Jocelyne Cesari

Jocelyne Cesari is currently the MINERVA CHAIR, affiliated at the National Defense University in Washington DC to conduct a research on Islam and Democratization in the context of the Arab Spring. She is also a Senior Visiting Professor of International Relations at the School of Advanced International Relations at John Hopkins University where she co-directs the Global Politics and Religion Initiative. At Harvard University, she directs the International Research Program called “Islam in the West” (http://cmes.hmdc.harvard.edu/research/iw). (See also www.islamopediaonline.org). Dr. Cesari is a French political scientist, tenured at the French National Center for Scientific Research in Paris and specializing in contemporary Islamic societies, globalization and democratization. She has written numerous articles and books on Islam, Globalization, Democratization and Secularism, including: Muslims in the West After 9/11: Religion, Politics and Law (2009, Routledge). Forthcoming book: (Islam Betrayed? The Making of Modern Islam and World Politics).

Jeanette S. Jouili

Jeanette S. Jouili is currently a fellow at the Society for the Humanities, Cornell University. In 2007, she received her PhD jointly from the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales in Paris (France) and the European University Viadrina in Frankfurt/Oder (Germany) and has subsequently held post-doctoral research positions at the Amsterdam Institute for Social Science Research at Amsterdam University and at the International Institute for the Study of Islam in the Modern World (ISIM), in Leiden, Netherlands where she did research on the (pious) Islamic cultural and artistic scene in France and the UK. Jeanette has published in various journals including Feminist Review, Social Anthropology, and Muslim World. She is also completing a book manuscript based on the material of her PhD dissertation provisionally titled “Pious Practice and Secular Constraints: Women in the Islamic Revival in France and Germany.” Her research and teaching interests include Islam in Europe, Islamic revivalism, secularism, pluralism, popular culture, moral and aesthetic practices, and gender.

Simone Maddanu is Postdoctoral Fellow in Sociology at the University of Political Sciences, Cagliari, Italy. His research interests include quotidian practices of young Muslims in Europe. He currently leads a research project titled The New Generations of Muslims in Europe, funded by European and Regional Grant. He took part in the EUROPUBLICISLAM project team as postdoctoral research fellow (2009-2010).

Nadla Marzouki is a Jean Monnet Fellow in the Mediterranean Program at the RSCAS. She received her PhD in political science from Sciences-Po, Paris in 2008. She has been a Postdoctoral fellow at the Council on Middle Eastern Studies, Yale University (2008-2010), and a visiting scholar at the University of Berkeley (2004-2005) and at Princeton University (2005-2006). Her work examines public controversies about Islam in Europe and the United States, and about Evangelical Christianity in North Africa. She is currently writing a book on American debates regarding Islam that will be published in France in 2013. She is also co-editing a book with Olivier Roy, on Religious conversions in the Mediterranean World, (Palgrave/Macmillan, publication planned for Winter 2013).
Olivier Remaud

John V. Tolan

John V. Tolan works on the history of religious and cultural relations between the Arab and Latin worlds in the Middle Ages. He received a BA in Classics from Yale, an MA and a PhD in History from the University of Chicago, and an Habilitation à diriger des recherches from the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales in Paris. He has

Halide Velhoğlu

Assistant Professor at the Social Sciences and Humanities Department at Doğuş University, Istanbul. She got her Ph.D. in Anthropology from the University of Texas at Austin. Her dissertation focuses on the public sentiments and daily lives of Bosniaks in Sarajevo. Her research interests include ethnography of the mundane, literature and Bosnian studies. Velhoğlu is born in Macedonia (ex-Yugoslavia), and daughter of a Bosnian family that migrated to Turkey in the second half of the last century. She studied Sociology (Boğaziçi University) in Istanbul, and was a member of the Boğaziçi Women Group and one of the founding editors of a bimonthly literature and culture periodical, Hayalet Gemi.

Fatih Abay

PhD student at the EHESS (Paris, France) and at the European University Viadrina (Frankfurt Oder, Germany) since 2011. Born and raised in Germany, he then graduated in European Studies (2007) from Maastricht University (Maastricht, The Netherlands) and holds an MA in Political Science (2008) from Central European University (Budapest, Hungary). His focus here was on social and political theory and he wrote his MA Thesis on Right-wing populism within Western Europe. His current research interests are Islam in Germany and Europe, Turkish Islam in Germany, Turkish migration and politics of integration in Germany and Europe, Secularism, Gender, Politics and Culture in Contemporary Turkey. Under the supervision of Prof. Nilüfer Göle and Prof. Werner Schiffauer he is currently working on his PhD thesis regarding the role of ‘secular/liberal Muslims’ within the German public sphere. Contact: fatihabay@gmail.com

Warda Hadjab

Doctorante en Sociologie sous la direction de Nilüfer Göle. Sa thèse propose une étude de l’amour chez les jeunes musulmans français, et s’attache particulièrement aux formes qu’il revêt, s’incarnant tant dans une forme discursive et matérielle, mais également dans les représentations et les pratiques différenciées des acteurs. Objet sociologique où s’articule les codifications de l’intimité et la culture affective des jeunes musulmans français, l’amour permet de saisir la résonance entre les pratiques et les subjectivités des acteurs avec les prescriptions islamiques.

Rachid Idrissi

Doctorant en sociologie l’École des hautes études en sciences sociales (CADIS/ICRESS) et attaché temporaire d’enseignement et de recherche au département de sociologie de l’université de Perpignan Via Domitia (UPVD/ART-Dev). Diplômé d’un premier master en sciences sociales des religions à l’EHESS/EPHE et d’un second en sociologie et anthropologie à l’UPVD, il mène actuellement ses travaux sur l’islam et les régionalismes européens, étudiant plus particulièrement le cas des musulmans de « Catalogne française ». Ses réflexions portent plus généralement l’articulation du social, du culturel

Bocha Kammarti

Bocha Kammarti graduated from the University of Granada (Spain) and the University of Leipzig (Germany) in sociology, political sciences and cultural studies. She obtained her Master’s degree in Social Sciences from the EHESS in 2008. She is currently a PhD student at the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales (EHESS) of Paris and the Ecole Normale Supérieure (ENS) of Lyon. In the framework of her PhD dissertation, she studies the relationship between culture and economy, in particular the case of Islamic Finance. She has integrated to the team of the ERC project EuroPublicIslam directed by Nilüfer Göle as a research assistant since November 2010.

Fatima Khemillat
Fatima Khemilat étudie actuellement la Science politique à l'Université de la Sorbonne et les Sciences Sociales des Religions à l'Ecole Pratique des Hautes. C'est dans une dynamique pluridisciplinaire -juridique, sociologique, politiste et linguistique- que ses travaux livrent un œil critique sur les enjeux et les controverses liés à la visibilité du fait religieux musulman dans l'espace public français.

Paul May